Jill Ge covers the full spectrum of IP litigation and transactions in China. Jill has extensive experience in contentious patent, trade secret and trade mark matters involving multinationals and in resolving cross-border disputes. She has been involved with a broad spectrum of key and important dispute matters including crown-jewel big pharma patent litigation as well as bet-the-farm IP arbitration.

Jill is extremely versatile. Drawing on her litigation experience, Jill also routinely advises on IP and data-heavy transactions and counsels technology and life science clients in relation to their development of IP strategies, as well as related regulatory and competition law issues. Jill has written extensively on IP developments in China, and one of her articles was quoted in an English Court of Appeal judgment (Conversant v Huawei). Jill has a technical background in physics and materials engineering. She studied law and was trained in the U.S. and qualified in the U.S. and China (non-practicing).
