Nick Groombridge is a founding partner of Groombridge, Wu, Baughman & Stone LLP, a firm specializing in patent and related technology litigation. He has been lead counsel in hundreds of patent matters over more than three decades, representing clients such as Amgen, Biogen, Edwards LifeSciences, Genentech, General Electric, Google, Merck, Microsoft and Twitter. He has tried numerous patent cases, both bench and jury, and has argued dozens of times before the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

Mr. Groombridge is a frequent speaker on law and policy in the intellectual property field, and has been an adjunct professor teaching patent-related courses at Columbia and NYU Law Schools.
